Sugarloaf Resource Center’s leadership has a non-hierarchical structure, organized to give equal opportunity to everyone desiring to be involved, especially youth who may have limited leadership experience. We always attempt to identify how interlocking systems of power impact those who are most marginalized in society and we respect unique contributions from everyone, including youth, elders, people of color, queer and trans people. We exist to create space and support for all individuals to experiment in self-led learning. All volunteers will be empowered to support and maintain a “safer” space for folks to feel welcome and respected; as a result, homophobic, racist, transphobic, ableist, sexist, ageist, body-shaming language, etc will not be allowed in the space. Does this all sound good to you? Do you have comments?

Can you give us contact information for two (or more) local references that would say you’re super responsible, real, and a good communicator? Let us know if you personally know a Resource Center collective member.

It’d be preferred if you could physically hand this to a volunteer, but you’re also welcome to slide it under the door at the Resource Center. Or, sure, you can definitely also email it to info@sugarloafcenter.org.
